MICRO UNITS

Micro-Unit 1. The First Angel's Call to Identity. Students form healthy identities and respect for all people as they grasp the true meaning of the first angel's judgment message. For the final project, students conduct research to determine feelings about the judgment and design projects that will lead others to a proper understanding of God's love in light of the judgment hour.

Micro-Unit 2. The First Angel's Call to Worship. Bible, language arts, history and science come to life as students study the second half of the first angel's message, "worship Him who made the heaven and earth, the sea and springs of water." Lessons engage the class as they explore the scientific arguments for creationism and the historical change of the Sabbath. Students extend the learning by delivering a presentation.

Micro-Unit 3. The Second Angel's Call to Liberty. High synergy for Bible and government classes is provided in these lessons covering the second angel's proclamation of the fall of Babylon. Current court cases are examined which threaten to remove the freedom to act according to Christian convictions and a moral compass. Students present a legal case involving religious liberty at the conclusion of the study.

Micro-Unit 4. The Third Angel's Call to Action. The third angel's warning of the mark in the hand and forehead as contrasted with faith in Jesus provides a call to live moral and upright lives now. History and scripture guide students as they study the ancient civilization of Rome and identify the beast of Revelation and its mark. Students are challenged to follow their conscience, stand up for convictions, and put their faith and trust in Jesus. The unit concludes with an open-ended project. (PBL)
